

The Qualitative Methods Master Class Webinar Series

Trustworthiness: Keeping the Path Clear

Qualitative researchers and doctoral dissertation students often struggle with the path that will be used to show trustworthiness within final chapters. Often, we find what is planned within the research process, the definitions of trustworthiness, and the findings related to trustworthiness. However, a clear path within the proposal or first three chapters of the research are not obvious. Keeping a clear path is important to reliability and validity of the study. While the correct references may also be seen within the document, a clear path such as a charted plan for the beginning processes and ending processes for the trustworthiness process, are not presented within the document. We propose that an actual chart with the planned actions of trustworthiness, assist the researcher and novice researchers in keeping the path clear, the actions obvious, and the write-up less complicated in the end. Thus, the process of this webinar is to present the process of “Keeping the Path Clear” for trustworthiness for those who are involved in qualitative research.

Registration Link: <https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/6564954513941075971>

August 24, 2017
10:00 am MST (Mountain Time)
Linda Amankwaa
School of Nursing
Albany State University

